

Girls in Aviation (GIA) Day will be held on Saturday, September 21, 2024, at Lone Star Flight Museum. And this year is the 10th Anniversary of this exciting day that spotlights the opportunities for girls in both the STEM and aviation industries.

Each year, GIA Day connects young girls in Greater Houston with inspiring women role models, professionals in the aviation industry and STEM education programs to learn about the infinite career paths in STEM and aviation. If you have attended GIA Day in previous years, thank you for supporting young girls and fueling their dreams!

Girls in Aviation Day brings together hundreds of girls - those who already have a passion for flight, and those who have never traveled in a plane or seen a plane up close - to be inspired by talented and accomplished speakers who share their real life and career journeys. The museum's network of expert partners are generous with their time, enthusiasm, and dedication in encouraging girls, as the future needs more aviators; and women are underrepresented in STEM and aviation.

GIA Day programming combines history, science and technology to spark each girl's curiosity through an aviation-inspired curriculum. This year, Girls In Aviation Day programming is based on age and readiness. Girls will participate in activities ranging from aircraft tours to flight simulations, to hands-on mechanics and drone "STEMonstrations," as well as meteorology workshops and an amazing career fair. The primary goal of the day's program is to uplift young girls as future aviators, astronauts, scientists, engineers and incredible leaders.

Lone Star Flight Museum respectfully asks you join our efforts to fuel participation of girls in STEM and aviation by graciously underwriting the 2024 Girls in Aviation Day. Please kindly indicate your sponsorship level and return the enclosed form to the museum by August 9, 2024. Your generous support powers the endless possibilities of a career in STEM, aviation, and beyond!

Thank you,

Ann E. Hobing
Senior Director of Education
& Community Outreach
